Raitt, Cary Contribute To 'ParkinSong' Benefit

BONNIE RAITT

Produced by Lloyd Maines (Dixie Chicks, Jimmie Dale Gilmore), the set also features songs by Steve Forbert, Dave Alvin, Lucy Kaplansky, Dar Williams, Kelly Willis, Alejandro Escovedo, eastmountainsouth and Neko Case, among others.

Bonnie Raitt, Caitlin Cary, David Crosby and Graham Nash are among the artists who have contributed songs to a two-disc singer/songwriter compilation that will raise funds to fight Parkinson's Disease. "ParkinSong, Volume One: 38 Songs of Hope," will be released May 11 via Ryko Distribution.

Proceeds will benefit the New Jersey-based ParkinSong Foundation, which uses music to raise awareness and money to research new and innovative therapies for treatment of Parkinson's Disease. The non-profit organization was founded by the three children of New Jersey schoolteacher Selma Litowitz, who has battled the disease for more than a decade.

The ParkinSong Foundation began with a 2001 benefit concert in Lawrenceville, N.J., where Litowitz taught high school English. Comedian/actor Jon Stewart, a former pupil, hosted the first event, while a second was held the following year in nearby Newtown, Pa. The organization intends to stage higher profile concerts on the East and West Coast later this year, and will begin assembling tracks for a second volume of the compilation.
